Medicine is an ever-evolving field; therefore, learning never ends. We need to update our knowledge on regular basis to keep abreast of latest development, be it technology, imaging and intervention, or new treatment protocols. Medical and research journals play a very important role in this update.

With this aim in mind, we started this journal 8 years back and I can now confidently say that we have been successful in achieving our goal of bringing updates in the field of Rhinology. Rhinology is among the fastest developing subspecialties of Otolaryngology. The endoscopic approach is the proffered mode of treatment over external approaches for most of the sinonasal pathologies. With the advent of image-guided navigation system, the endoscopic approaches to skull base have become more meticulous and safe.

I hope in the coming years, this journal will be able to reach Otolaryngologists all over India and abroad and they will be able to share their expertise among each other.
